What inspires these volunteers to serve on WLCF? Read on.

Incoming President, Sandy Kuhlman, has served on the board for four years. "Seeing the difference WLCF makes in the Western Lane community is personally very motivating and inspiring. Not only do we support the many nonprofits serving our community but we make a significant difference in the lives of those pursuing advanced education whether it be college or technical training. It's an honor to be part of such an organization."

Karen Skulley is pleased to serve once again on the WLCF board supporting community non-profits and students through local philanthropic legacy gifts of endowments, grants and scholarships.

Sally Wantz is pleased to serve again because "WLCF is a premier organization that fits with my values of community members helping other community members."

Jim Waterman is a retired mental health and substance abuse administrator who spent his career developing and supporting community and peer support services. He is excited to participate on the WLCF board to continue to support services developed by grass roots organizations and focused on the local community.

Cindy Forsythe serves on the board because "I feel very strongly about contributing to my community. Being involved in WLCF multiplies that effort, as we are uniquely able to help donors, do-ers, and the disadvantaged."
